Servants Sought In Lindbergh Case Are Located Friday

Couple Who Disappeared on Day Following Abduction Found in Pa.

DENY CONNECTION

Both Return to New Jersey for Further Questioning by Police

BRYN MAWR, Pa. — (AP) — Katie Thornberg and Paul Engenstonberg, alias Paul Thornberg, servants sought for questioning in connection with the Charles A. Lindbergh kidnaping, were found Friday morning, in the home of a prominent Bryn Mawr family.

The man and woman left the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Leandro Lightfoot of Franklin Park, N. J. the day after the kidnaping.

They both denied any connection with the kidnaping and said they left the Lightfoots because they could not get along with a son of the couple.

They voluntarily left for Hopewell, N. J., for further questioning by police.

Bondholders Want Million Per Year

Money County Judges Get From Gas Tax Would Provide Retirement

LITTLE ROCK — (AP) — Arkansas must adopt legislation satisfactory to the holders of Arkansas bonds or suffer the consequences, the Little Rock Real Estate Board was told yesterday by John Potts, vice president of W. B. Worthen Company, Bankers. Mr. Potts was principal speaker at the board's weekly luncheon meeting at the Albert Pike hotel.

"The consequence will be," Mr. Pot's said in substance "that real property of the state will be assessed to retire the bonds.

"As a banker I am vitally interested in whatever action the present special session of the legislature might take. I think it is the most important problem before the people of Arkansas today. The banks of Arkansas do not own road bonds, but they do render a service for the bond holders by assisting in collections as well as in the sale of bonds.

"I have talked with representatives of the Arkansas road bondholders and I do not believe their attitude will be unfair. They do not feel that the legislature should expect them to accept extended maturity dates with lower interest rates on the bonds they now hold.

"The bondholders, most of them institutions that know their rights and are thoroughly familiar with all the laws governing public debts, will not accept any legislation that might cause their securities to be less desirable. If they are not satisfied with the refinancing plan finally adopted by the legislature, they will have the officials of the various counties extend the taxes on the lands. If necessary they will bring this about by mandamus proceedings.

"They will, however, accept extended maturity dates at the present interest rates provided the state will reduce the bonded indebtedness at the rate of $1,000,000 per year.

"I believe it would be better for the state to use the $900,000 per year now being refunded to the counties on gasoline taxes in making the required reduction than to have the debts revert to the lands."

A committee composed of directors of the board was appointed at Mr. Potts' suggestion to consider the matter and decide whether official steps should be taken by the board to bring about legislation suggested by the bond institutions.

Oscar McCaskill, acting chairman of a committee appointed last week to draft plans for a property owners' division of the Little Rock Real Estate Board, reported that a complete outline of the proposed organization will be submitted at next Thursday's meeting. Members of the board hope to organize Pulaski county property owners as a means of lowering the tax burden for real property.

Statement of Apache Indian Is Read

GLOBE, Ariz.—(AP)—The purported confession of Mae (Golney) Seymour, read to the jury trying him for murder quoted him as saying he knocked Henrietta Schmerler down with a rock, then stabbed her and left her while she was still breathing.

The fight with the Columbia University co-ed took place in a ravine on the White River reservation near where the body was found last July, according to the statement. The Indian said he had had intimate relations with the girl.

Action On Banks' Demurrer Delayed

Judge Awaits Decision on Similar Decision in the Supreme Court

OSCEOLA—Circuit Judge Neil Killough, after considering the demurrer filed by attorneys for A. B. Banks, former president of a chain of Arkansas banks charged with having received deposits in the First State bank of Osceola when he knew it was in an insolvent condition, said Thursday that inasmuch as a similar case is pending in the Supreme Court and had been set for submission March 28, he would make no ruling at present. He continued the case against Banks until the next term of court.

The demurrer brought out the question of whether a bank is insolvent, within the meaning of the law, until it has been examined by the state bank examiner and the fact ascertained whether its assets are less than its liabilities.

In the case of Finley W. Cartwright, Osceola hardware merchant, charged with the murder of M. L. Crawford, the state rested its case about noon and four or five defense witnesses had been heard this afternoon when one of the jurors became ill and was excused.

Lawyers were conferring Thursday night to determine what action would be followed. It was pointed out that the case can be continued with 11 jurors, but in case the defendant is found guilty an appeal can be made to the Supreme Court. If the 11-man jury acquits the defendant the case is settled as far as further action is concerned.

Saenger Crowded To Hear Star Cook

Mrs Kate Stafford Closes 1932 School Friday Afternoon

Close to a thousand women crowded the Saenger theater Friday afternoon at the farewell session of The Star's fourth annual free Cooking School.

Mrs. Kate Stafford, appearing for the last time at the 1932 School, lectured on fine pastries and other party dishes, preparing each recipe to the last minute detail in her model kitchen on the state, which turned out one culinary wonder after another.

The crowd which greeted her Friday was a fine testimonial to the esteem in which The Star's Cooking Schools every spring-time are held by the housewives of Hope and Southwest Arkansas.

It was also a high tribute to Mrs. Stafford, who beginning Tuesday afternoon, spoke to an ever-increasing audience that on Thursday and Friday equalled the best crowds of previous years.

The lecturer was frequently interrupted Friday by women, eagerly following her recipes with note-book and pencil, who wished additional details as to the method the cook followed—a practice which Mrs. Stafford encouraged, answering each question fully from the stage as she made up her respective dishes in the model kitchen.

Again, as on Thursday, the Saenger gallery was crowded with negro women and girls who listened as attentively as folks downs airs. The home economics classes of the negro schools had been dismissed early both Thursday and Friday in order to attend the final sessiones at the Saenger.

City Will Launch Drive on Mosquito Within Next Week

Missouri Pacific to Furnish Oil and Foreman for Ditch Work

ACTION IS PLEDGED

Mayor Vesey to Publish Pamphlet on Mosquito Control

Hope's anti-mosquito campaign, which was authorized at last Tuesday's meeting of the city council, will be started within the next week, Mayor John Vesey announced Friday.

Mr. Vesey was in conference Friday with B. B. Freeman, sanitary engineer of the Missouri Pacific, who is detailed by the railroad company to assist communities along its lines to fight the mosquito and malaria.

The Missouri Pacific is contributing substantially to the present campaign, Mr. Vesey said. The railroad, Mr. Freeman told him, will not only furnish free oil for the destruction of mosquito-breeding places, but will also pay a ditch foreman to start correctly the work of draining low-lying places where stagnant water gives mosquitoes a chance to get started.

According to the sanitary engineer, a successful war against the mosquito post must be started within the next two weeks—and Mayor Vesey said every effort would be made to get it under way within a week.

The mayor announced that the city would prepare a pamphlet for distribution to all citizens, explaining just where mosquitoes breed, and what places must be kept under close watch to prevent larvae from cropping out into adult mosquitoes.

With this information in the hands of citizens, and a city force aided by the railroad company patrolling the larger sources of mosquito-breeding, Mayor Vesey believes Hope may be made almost entirely mosquito-free this coming summer.

Mrs. Ward Dabney Entertains Rotary

Hope Singer Furnishes Delightful Program at Luncheon Friday

Mrs. Ward Dabney, talented singer and music director, entertained Hope Rotary club for half an hour at luncheon Friday in Hotel Barlow.

Introduced by Nick Jewell, in charge of Friday's program, Mrs. Dabney charmed her audience with spirited direction of club singing, interspersed with half a dozen vocal numbers of her own, ranging from Irish melodies, in honor of St. Patrick's day Thursday, to negro spirituals and popular ballads.

A graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and a former supervisor of music in the public schools of Kentucky, Mrs. Dabney has already earned a high place among local music-lovers with her work at the First Presbyterian church. She is the wife of the director of the Texas Oil Station 933, and is a newcomer to Hope.

Another guest Friday at Rotary was David Nelson, of Texarkana.

Suppressed Desires To Be Shown Here

The Initial Production of Hope's Little Theater Scheduled Mar. 22

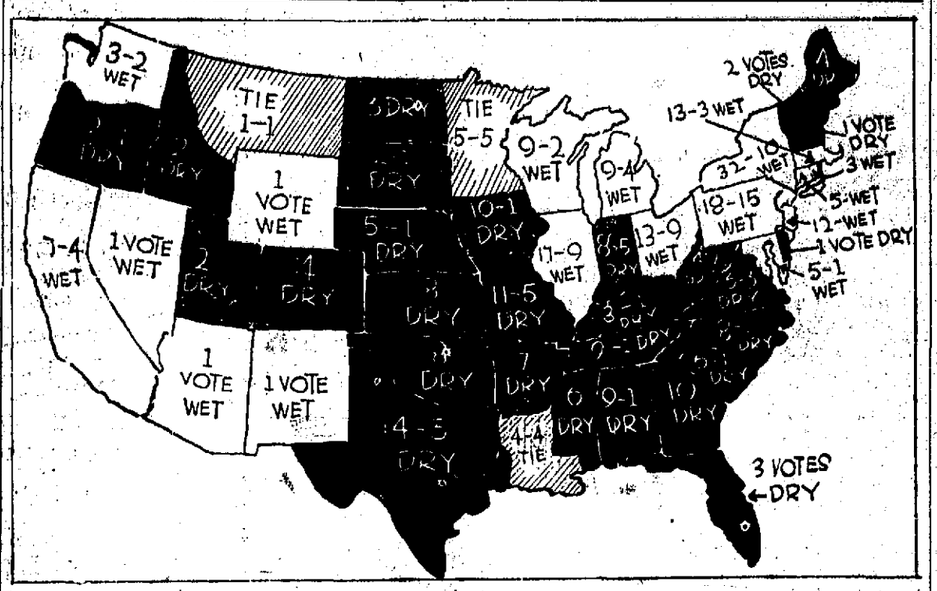

Characters have been selected and rehearsals are being held for the first production of the Hope Little Theater. The play to be presented is Susan Glaspell's comedy in two episodes, "Suppressed Desires."

It deals with the story of a young lady who has made an intensive study of psychoanalysis, and attributes all unusual actions of her husband and sister to some suppressed desires. How these deires are brought into conciousness and what trouble they cause furnish a situation for one of the most popular and clever comedies in modern drama. The cast selected for this play consists of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Henderson and Miss Miriam Carlton. Miss Martha Virginia Stuart is directing the production.

Through the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Hecht, local manager for the Saenger theater, the play will be presented at the Saenger Tuesday evening March 22, along with the popular picture, "Strangers in Love."

Tickets are now on sale and everyone is urged to purchase one and attend this initial production of the Hope Little Theater.

How Congress Vote Mapped Prohibition

When Congress voted on a proposal to bring the Beck-Linthicum prohibition amendment out of committee in the first wet-dry test of importance since 1917, Representatives lined up as shown in sketch map above. The Beck-Linthicum resolution, still locked in committee, would amend the 18th amendment to allow state control of liquor. Wets piled up a surprise vote of 187 to bring the proposal before Congress. They were defeated by 227 dry-voting congressmen. The 18th amendment originally was adopted in the House by a vote of 282 for and 128 against.

Lawyers Argue in L. & A. Wage Row

Financial Statements Start Controversy Before U. S. Arbitration Board

SHREVEPORT, La.—(AP)—Opposing lawyers clashed verbally Thursday over whether financial statements of the Louisiana and Arkansas railroad justified a 10 per cent basic wage reduction put in effect for transportation crafts of the road effective March 1.

The case is being argued before President Hoover's emergency board which is seeking, under terms of the railway labor act, to effect a settlement of the wage controversy.

A. L. Burford, for the railroad and C. H. Smith, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, argued over exhibits produced by the employes representatives seeking to show that the railroad was in good financial condition and was one of five in the country with a net operating income in 1931 over 1930.

Mr. Buford said the wage cut was inaugurated by the railroad because of stress of times and reduced revenue. The employes said their exhibits were taken from Interstate Commission reports. Buford asked: "Do you have gross income in this exhibit?"

Buford remarked that the question could be answered by "yes or no."

Smith replied "Ill answer it in my own way. You can't tell me how to answer it."

Justice Walter P. Stacey, of the North Carolina Supreme Court, chairman of the board, suggested to Mr. Burford that "in view of the fact that your questions lead to arguments would you wind deferring them until later?" The subject was passed.

The employes attorney offered exhibits on terminal delay regulations which they said had financially benefitted the L. and A. and had decreased the pay to employes.

Smith said the exhibits were intended to show that the L. and A. was in more favorable circumstances than most railroads which recently reached an agreement with employes for a 10 per cent wage reduction. He contended that the L. and A. should be bound by that agreement instead of making a basic cut, but the railroad officials contended they were not bound by the conference in Chicago as they did not participate.

H. C. Couch Back Home For Visit

Says Finance Board Is Working to Relieve Distressed Business

PINE BLUFF—Harvey C. Couch, who has been in Washington, D. C. for several weeks serving with the Board of Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, arrived here Thursday to visit his family.

All members of the board are working hard at the job assigned them, with a view of acting quickly on such applications from banks and other institutions for loans approved by the local, district and central agency and examiners, Mr. Couch said. He said little about the details of the corporation. The act creating the corporation prohibits giving out information regarding loans to banks, and other institutions. Railroads alone are excepted, because railroad loans must be approved by Interstate Commerce Commission.

"We are working hard at the job," Mr. Couch said. "The men comprising the board are a fine set of gentlemen and it is a pleasure to work with them They are sincerely desirous of being of help to the country and are not sparing themselves. I am trying to do the best I can to render the best possible service to our nation and our section. I slipped off for a few days to be with home folks and get a little fresh air, and I want to say that Arkansas never looked so good to me.

Mr. Couch said it was gratifying that there had been no bank failures in Arkansas recently, that several Arkansas banks have reopened, and that the decrease in the number of bank suspensions throughout the country, and the reopening of these institutions, demonstarted that the assistance being extended by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is having its effect.

The board meets every day at 2:30 p. m., and frequently is in session until 7 and 8 p. m. The forenoon is spent by the members in studying statements accompanying applications, and discussing situations with business leaders and members of the legal and other departments of the corporation.

Mr. Couch plans to fish a few days before returning to Washington. On his way back it is probable he will stop in Jackson, Miss., where he will be the honor guest at a dinner by the Chamber of Commerce.

Reduction in State Auto Tags Favored By Vote of 26 to 2

House Seeks Information on Irregularities in Highway Department

DETAILS ARE SOUGHT

The Senate Resolution on Hearing Postponed Until Monday

LITTLE ROCK.— (AP) —The State Highway Audit Commission was called upon by the House Friday to give all information as to any testimony obtained in its investigation which would tend to show irregularities in the State Highway Department.

Representative Hester, of Desha county, author of a resolution adopted by the House, declared that the chairman of the audit commission, Judge Waggoner, had seen and approved the resolution and had made a suggestion that when this information was submitted, it be read to the House at an executive session.

Hester made this statement after Representative Evans, of Pope county, raised an objection that it might not be proper to require the audit commission to make known such information at this time.

The resolution called for detailed information on the subject.

A resolution making a similar request to the Audit Commission was introduced in the Senate by Northcutt and after considerable debate was postponed action until 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The Senate passed by a vote of 26 to 2, the Kimsey bill, providing for reduction in automobile licenses fees.

This bill contains a provision that if revenue from licenses during the first nine months that the act is effective shows a serious drop, the rates would be automatically repealed.

The Senate also passed a bill authorizing Building and Loan Associations to obtain loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or similar agencies.

THE common man does get a break, now and then. Sometimes he has to wait a long time for it, but it always comes sooner or later.

His most recent break is the approval by Congress of the Norris-LaGuardia bill outlawing the "yellow dog" contract.

To understand what a real break this is, you must cast a glance or two back at the long history of organized labor.

In the old days before steam engines and large-scale factory employment, of course, there was no need for a labor union. Every worker knew his employer personally and was personally known by him, and the two could usually strike a fair bargain for the worker's services without much trouble.

The arrival of the factory, in which anywhere from 100 to 5000 men would work on one job, changed all of that. Workers and boss became strangers. The boss could say, "take it or leave it," and the worker had no comeback.

So workers began to organize—and the law came down on them. For a time labor unions were highly illegal. Organizers in England were treated as criminals and deported to Australia along with murderers and highway robbers. Not until years had passed was it generally admitted that wage-earners did have the right to form associations and bargain collectively.

Then some genius invented the "yellow dog" contract. That works like this:

You, as a wage-earner, get a job in a factory. When you get it you are required to sign a contract pledging yourself never to join a labor union. You also agree not to quit work without the boss' consent.

By and by times get hard. You need higher wages and the boss won't give them to you. You and your fellow workers decide to strike. The boss promptly gets an injunction from some judge prohibiting you from breaking your contract.

Then, when you strike, you are not simply out of a job; you have violated a court order and you can be thrown in jail.

That is what the Norris-LaGuardia bill is aimed at. The rights of the common man have gained a new valuable recognition.

The Real Problem

AN atomerg, in case you don't know, is the smallest possible particle of energy—the ultimate building block of which everything in the universe, from a great mountain to a flickering candle flame, is made.

It is described in the new theory of matter put forward recently by Dr. E. K. Plyler, of the University of North Carolina, and it is so incredibly small that if you wanted to write down its size you would have to put down a decimal point, follow it with 47 ciphers and then add the figure 7.

All of this, while it is simply incomprehensible to those of us who don't happen to be physicists or mathematicians, represents an important new scientific advance, and demonstrates anew what a marvellously active and intelligent thing the human brain can be: but it also serves to show the curiously uneven way in which our knowledge advances.

We can trace the kinship between matter and energy down to a point unbelievably remote, and can dissect the structure of all created things with a precision that almost transcends through: and yet on such practical matters as finding a way in which all human beings can always have enough to eat and enough to wear and a warm place to sleep we sometimes seem as incompetent as a group of school children.

Again, we can give a fairly accurate account of how the universe is put together—which, everything considered, is quite an achievement—but we know no more why, or when, or what it is all about, than did the buffalo-hunting Indians of our western plains two centuries ago.

We make magnificent triumphs in our laboratories and send thought questing restlessly beyond the most remote frontiers; but we have not yet solved the simple problem of getting along with one another in peace and harmony, and we have to spend a crushing proportion of all our wealth on weapons with which to kill one another when our quarrels get too acrid.

If, some day, we can learn to apply the same intelligence that now goes to scientific research and speculation to the homelier problems of everyday life, we might be able to make this an exceedingly pleasant and livable world.

An Excellent Idea

MAYOR JACK EDWARDS of Marion, Ind., seems to have had an idea that many another city could profitably copy.

Mayor Edwards' idea, briefly, is to have all traffic law violators pa ytheir fines in articles of food, clothing or fuel. The commodities obtained in this way are turned over to the city's needy.

It would be hard to imagine a neater way of killing two birds with one stone. The traffic offenders get punished for their misdeeds, the city is materially helped in its task of caring for the unemployed, and there is no extra burden on anyone.

Farm Lands Need Greater Fertility

Commissioner of Agriculture Says Land Is Badly Worn

In my opinion one of the greatest needs of agriculture in Arkansas is that of rebuilding or increasing the fertility and producng power of the lands in cultivation. Literally millions of acres of Arkansas farm lands have been farmed to death, with little or nothing done to restore the original fertility of the soil. It does not get us anywhere to point out the fault, nor to berate those who are responsible, or the system of farming that brought it about. What we need most to do is to get busy along intelligent lines and get as many acres as possible of these worn-out lands back into form and restore their original producing power. There are numerous ways to do this, most of which have been discussed in agricultural meetings, by county agents, extension workers and other individuals identified with agricultural work, in bulletins and pamphlets, and in publications in the newspapers. Since commercial fertilizers were brought up to a high standard of excellence, many of our best farmers have sought the easier method of buying fertilizer for plant food instead of employing the slower methods of crop rotation, livestock production and the growing of soil-improving crops—with the result that a great deal of our best farm land will not now produce maximum crops without the use of commercial fertilizer. High-priced cotton and high prices for other crops have helped very materially to bring this condition about, and many farmers under the adversities of 1930 and 1931 have awakened to the fact that their lands are depleted in plant food and that the prices of farm crops will not justify the purchase of fertilizer. Out of all this the farmers should get a good lesson, and that is that if they expect to continue on the farm as farmers they must arrange their cropping system on such a basis that by rotation, by the growing of livestock and of legume and soil-improving crops, both in winter and summer, they will, over a cycle of three years, put back into the soil as much plant food as they farm out of it. This is well balanced farming that will maintain the fertility of the soil, maintain the value of the farm, and enable the farmer to produce crops on an economical basis. Economy in production depends upon the producing power of the soil more than on any other one factor. Any farmer can understand that it requires just about as much labor and expense to produce a crop on land that makes a small yield as it does on land that makes a good yield. Hence, one of the main things in farming should be to maintain the fertility of the soil.

In order to stimulate farm owners to improve their soils, or at least to get a start of one of the best soil-improving crops that is acid-tolerant and will grow on most any kind of soil, I have acquired one thousand pounds of Korean lespedeza seed, that I will divide into one-pound packages for distribution to those farm owners who really want to get a start of this splendid legume hay and pasture crop. This is an invitation to all who desire to get a start in a small way of Korean lespedeza on their farms. The seed will be sent out in one-pound packages in the order in which applications are received, until the supply is exhausted. The seed will be sent to farm owners only, who live on and operate their own farms. No seed will be sent to farm owners to be used by tenants. The object is to get a start on farms actually farmed by their owners, so the benefits will be permanent. I do not want an application from any farmer who will not agree to save all the seed and replant it the following year. Korean lespedeza will grow on most any soil. The pound of seed will plant a plot about 40 x 50 feet, and will produce enough seed for five acres next year. This will be the means of getting it established in 1,000 farms. It is a good hay crop, next to alfalfa as a hay. It makes good pasture. It will enrich the soil as much as any clover. It will re-seed itself. It will grow twice as tall as common Japan clover. If you want to try this out, write at once for a package. If your application comes too late you will not get a package, as I have only 1,000 to distribute.

Glorious news from the army—battle of Beuna Vista—General Taylor victorious—4000 Mexicans killed and only 700 Americans.

We are indected to the politeness of the clerk of the Steamer Edna, at Camden, for an extra Pickayune of the night of the 22nd, from which it will be seen that the rumors from the seat of the war which have for some weeks past created so much excitement throughout the country, have at length settled into glorious certainty. Of the truth of the following statement brought to the editors of the Ner Orleans Pickayune by the schooner John Bell, there can be no doubt, and although it must occasion sorrow for the death of the brave who have fallen in the country's service, it must also call forth the highest admiration for the indomitable courage of old Rough and Ready, and his gallant men, and unbounded joy for the success of our arms. The rumors which we had heard were so contradictory that we placed but little confidence in them. We could not believe that Santa Anna had destroyed 2000 out of an American army of 5000 men, and those men headed by General Taylor. Such destruction would have been unprecedented in the annals of warfare.

Football enthusiasts, looking not so enthusiastic, snapped at the 1931 Notre Dame-Northwestern game played in Chicago.

● 10c a month . . . less than 2½c a week . . . is the trifling cost of using Morton's Iodized Salt. So why take chances with unknown brands that may clog saltcellars in damp weather? Made with cube-shaped crystals, which tumble off one another instead of sticking together like the flake crystals of inferior salts, Morton's pours just as freely on rainy days as on dry. Too, it prevents simple goiter, a cause of loss of appetite, lack of vigor and backwardness in studies among children between the ages of 6 and 18.

When examined under a magnifying glass, each tiny crystal of Morton's Salt is found to be a perfect cube.

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

Life is a woven fabric;
The pattern and web are wrought
By the dark threads and the bolden
That into the loom are shot.

You cannot judge God's purpose
By the thrust of a single thread,
What to you may be dark, mysterious,
May be gloriously bright instead.

For he who holds in mind a pattern
As fair as His love is strong,
Which grows each day in the weaving
Not a single thread goes wrong.

So trust in the Weaver's wisdom,
In His love and unfailing care,
And the fabric of life, completed,
Some day will be wondrous fair.

The Keynote of the decorations was spring, and the theme was very beautifully carried out with quantities of lovely spring flowers, with the pleasing color scheme of orchid and yellow predominating. The Easter motif was emphasized in the tempting luncheon and table decorations. Following the luncheon, bridge was played from five tables. Mrs. Williams had as special guests for this delightful occasion, Mrs. W. E. Booker, Mrs. Miles Clennison, Mrs. Otto Carley, Mrs. Ab Hollingsworth, Mrs. Bill Moore, Mrs. Jim Bachellor, Mrs. Jake Glaster, Mrs. Carl Cinn, Mrs. Horace Williams, Mrs. John Williams, Mrs. Arthur Carley, Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. Reed Scales, Mrs. Ralph Stringer, Mrs. Glenn Reaves all of Sheridan, Ark. and Mrs. Frank Nolan, Mrs. R. The regular meeting of the Hope Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Don Smith on South Elm street, Thursday afternoon, with Mesdames W. T. Franks and Vesey-Crutchfield, assistant hostesses.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. H. H. Stuart, president, and opened with the singing of "Work For Enforcement Where You Are," with Mrs. S. H. Marmack at the Piano.

Mrs. J. L. Cannon gave the devotional, basing her helpful remarks on First Corinthians 3:7-10.

Following the secretary's report, reports were given by the chairman of the Flower Mission and Medal Contest committees, and a letter was read from the Arkansas Children's Home asking for contributions to the milk fund of that institution.

Mrs. Stuart gave an interesting list of reasons why each member should participate in the hold fast membership campaign of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. D. B. Thompson presented a program which included a demonstration of the 1932 campaign for members, by Mesdames W. M. Cantley and L. F. Higgason, which was followed by a paper, "The Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. S. H Warmack.

During the social hour the hostesses assisted by Mrs. B. L. Kaufmann and Miss Johnnie Franks served a delicious salad plate, with hot tea.

Good Old Sun

WASHINGTON.—Old Sol, in serving the earth, has furnished some interesting figures for the Meterological Tables of Smithsonian Institution. It has been figured that the noonday sun on a clear day gives 465,000 times as much light as the full moon at its zenith. Its light during this period is nearly 120,000 times greater than that given by all the stars in hte sky on a clear night.

A Column Dedicated to the Children of Hope and Members of Saenger Kiddies Club

Dear Children:

Saturday afternoon at 1 p. m. we are going to open a Kiddies Club at the Saenger Theatre. Now for the benefit of the few boys and girls who do not already know about the club I am going to explain it right now.

The P. T. A. of Hope, the Star and Saenger theater decided that since there are so many fine little boys and girls in Hope who have nothing to do and no place to go on Saturday, we would organize a club that is for every child of this city, between the ages of 5 and 12. We wanted to have the kind of club that every boy and girl would be proud to be a member of and every mother would be proud to send their child to. The result was the Saenger Kiddies Club. Now here is what we are going to do for our opening program Saturday. At 1 o'clock there will be a play on the stage presented by Miss Owens' 5A class, from the Brookwood school of which Mrs. C. L. Renfro is the principal. This will be a clever play entitled "Signing the Declaration of Independence." The characters in the play are Jimmy Atkins, Bill Tom Bundy, Costa Carlson, Eugene Green, Delton Huston, Leroy Murphy, Vaddeké Payne, Frank Schumard, J. C. White, Mitchell Williams, Katherine Anderson, Jane Carter, Anita Jean Davis, Rebeca Drake, Ruth Fritz, Iona Green, Francis Harper, Marjorie Mosec, Myriam Porter, Margurite Simms, Mariam Smith, Alta Tefteller, Mary Evelyn Whitworth, Agnes Gaynes and Evelyn Ross.

After the play there will be singing and games and then we will show our feature picture Tom Tyler in the "Man From Death Valley" and a new serial "The Mystery Trooper" and a "Bang Up' Cartoon. Every boy and girl attending the club will be given a prize souvenier thats "good to eat." There will be no advance in admission prices, ten cents will admit you to see the whole program.

By the way I almost forgot to tell you that there will be a parade of all the members of the club starting from the Saenger at 12:45 p. m. Be sure to be on time and get in the parade. Everyone will have a great big time.

Well dear boys and girls I will look for each and every one of you at the Kiddies Club Saturday at 1 p. m. and if you're not there I'll feel real hurt.

Remember there will be no dues charged to the members of the club, so yours till tomorrow.

May Lose Title

LONDON.—The world's loneliest island, Tristan da Cunah, may lose its title if a scheme on foot in England is realized. There is talk of establishing a meterological station on the island and a radio station is planned to transmit weather news to England. It is suggested that the island would make an excellent base for an air line between America and South Africa.

Trust Suit Decision Is Set for March 28

AUSTIN—(AP)—District Judge J. D. Moore has set March 28 to hand down his rung on constitutionality of the Texas anti-trust laws attacked as invalid by defendants in the antitrust ouster suit brought by Attorney General James V. Allred against 15 major oil companies and two petroleum associations.

Allred sued for cancellation of the rights of the defendants to operate in Texas and for penalties aggregating $17,350,000, alleging the defendants violated the Texas anti-trust laws by conspiring to monopolize retail market outlets for gasoline and refined oil products.

The companies attacked the anti-trust laws as unconstitutional, arguing that a legislative act, exempting farm co-operatives from prosecution under the laws against trusts, had rendered the main zody of anti-trust statutes invalid.

Should Judge Moore hold the laws unconstitutional, [illegible] would be [illegible] determination of the validity of statutes by the supreme court.

...CHAPTER XXXIX

SYMES looked at the white-faced girl. He cleared his throat. "It's not so bad as all that," he said awkwardly.

"It's as bad as it can possibly be," Ellen declared passionately. "That I—that I should drag Steven's name through such a scandal—"

"Now you're being foolish, my dear," the lawyer protested. "Steven was one of my closest friends, you know that. But you and I must think now of your position. That is what Steven would want us to do."

He frowned, considering the practical aspects of the matter, and then spoke again.

"Unfortunately appearances count for a great deal in law," he began reluctantly. "Appearances are against you. Steven, in his anxiety to spare you disagreeable publicity, made the marriage appear—well, rather unusual. He went to great pains to keep the marriage secret. The license that was not to be filed, the friends who weren't informed, the newspapers left in ignorance of his intended marriage. You can see how it looks."

"I can see," said the girl.

There was silence. Ellen's body trembled as though she were having a chill. Her tortured eyes did not leave the lawyer's face. "I'm imagining all this—it's not true—I'll wake up soon," she tried to tell herself. Then she would become conscious again of Symes' troubled face.

She sat very still while the bitter thoughts thronged upon her. The marriage with Steven had been no marriage at all. The world would believe either that Steven had deceived an innocent girl with a mock marriage or that she, Ellen Rossiter, in her eagerness to capture a rich man, had been reckless of the fact that the man was the husband of another woman.

If only Steven were alive—but Steven was dead! And because a cruel, grasping woman, had crept to Mexico and bribed a court, his name was to be dishonored and with it the name of the girl he loved.

"But the divorce was announced in all the newspapers nearly two years ago," Ellen said in a voice that was without life, without hope.

"I know it," Symes agreed with a short laugh. "But you underestimate Miss Grayson's ingenuity. Steven announced the divorce. All the proceedings, if you remember, were kept secret. Miss Grayson was abroad at the time, had gone even before Steven went to Mexico. She's been dancing there ever since. She admits there'd been a separation—a sort of 'trial' she calls it. But she's back in New York now to tell the world she never consented to a divorce.

"She even has an explanation for her long silence," he continued. "Says she knew nothing of the divorce until a few weeks ago, and then sailed at once to have it set aside. A bare-faced lie—but we can't prove it, I'm afraid."

* * *

ELLEN said nothing at all. There was nothing at all to be said.

"If only Steven hadn't been such a rich man—" she heard Symes' voice from a long way off.

"Can't we do anything?" she asked pitifully.

"We can save you from reporters for a while," he said, frowning. "We'll keep mum until the whole thing comes up in court."

"Why do we have to go to court?" Ellen cried.

"Leda Grayson will fight to the last ditch and be delighted at the chance."

"Fight for what? Steven loved me. She can't take that away!"

The girl's voice was courageous and steady now.

"She won't take the money, either," Symes responded grimly. "We have plenty of witnesses to his wishes. No matter how you come out in the fight to be recognized as his wife, you'll get the money. I have those settlements all drawn up. God, if I'd only let him sign them when he wanted to!

"We can prove any way," he continued, "that you had no suspicion that the marriage was bigamous. Your mother was there, your sister—"

"Stop! Stop this instant!" Ellen broke in with shock and pain. "I don't want the money! I've told you again and again. It's not the money that's driving me frantic."

"My dear child, that money belongs to you," he protested, startled. "Steven wanted you to have it. That was almost the last thing he was thinking of—your future. You can't throw away a fortune."

"I can't!" Ellen repeated hysterically. "Why can't I? Is that what you were thinking of? Is that what you meant by court? Steven gave me everything and now—now that he's dead you think I'd fight for more, drag his name through the newspapers, have people thinking that he thought so little of my honor—?"

* * *

SYMES was genuinely amazed by the girl's earnestness. Patiently he pointed out that the money was hers, that only a court battle stood between her and possession. Patiently he pointed out that with the money she could go anywhere, seek new scenes, new people, new interests. But Ellen stopped him. She looked up to him and asked, "But if it weren't for the money you and I could do for Steven this thing that—he can't do for him self?"

"Keep the marriage with you a secret," he answered thoughtfully. "I suppose it could be managed. Yes, I'm certain it could be managed but it's a mad idea. Are you sure of what you're doing?"

"Quite sure," she said steadily.

"I don't believe I've ever met so quixotic a young woman."

"It's not only Steven I'm thinking of," Ellen admitted in a shamed, honest voice. "I'm thinking of myself. I don't think I could bear the publicity. I want to get away—I want to go back to being the girl I used to be."

Small and dazed, in a crumpled white linen dress that was no whiter than her exhausted face, Ellen sat looking at the lawyer and pleaded that this part of her life should be blotted out as though it had never been.

"Certainly you can," he said gruffly, untruthfully.

* * *

SHE knew that he had lied but was grateful for the falsehood.

"In the first place I'll arrange to get the license for you," Symes went on practically. "I saw the Rev. Mr. Southey yesterday and I know he'll be only too ready to forget his part in the ceremony. He was considerably upset when I spoke to him. But about the license—how long was the filing of it to be held up? Do you know?"

"Until after we'd sailed," Ellen said on a half sob.

"Steady—steady," Symes warned her, but she was silent again and composed. "How many people know of the marriage besides your immediate family?"

"Why, no one," Ellen began and then stopped. "Mrs. Clancy, a neighbor of ours knows," she amended. "Mrs. Clancy and Lorene Elcott."

"Can you trust them?"

"I'm sure I can."

"You understand that a situation of this sort is extremely difficult to keep hidden," Symes said. "You understand that any newspaper would be eager to buy such a sensation. Can you trust Mrs. Clancy?"

Ellen nodded.

"I can answer for myself, for the nurse, and for the physicians. Dr. Wescott doesn't think any way—"

"I know," Ellen interrupted. "I know that he didn't think I was married to Steven. I could tell from the first."

"Physicians see such strange things," Symes put in uncomfortably.

"How about Fergus?" she whispered.

"I'd forgotten him. But he hardly counts. He'd never seen you before, had he? Doesn't know your name, or where you live?"

"I gave him Mrs. Clancy's phone number and asked him to say that Ellen wanted her mother but—that's all."

Even as Ellen spoke Fergus entered quietly, softly. Seeing him frightened the girl vaguely. Fergus seemed to menace her frail security. She felt he distrusted and disliked her as much as she disliked and distrusted him.

"What is it?" Symes asked.

"Dr. Wescott is just leaving, sir," Fergus said. "He's going to report Mr. Barclay's death and wanted to see you first."

"All right. I'll see him," Symes answered, rising. "By the way," he continued, "do you know if Mr. Barclay's sister is in town or not. She should be notified."

"Mrs. Harrowgate returned from Europe several weeks ago," Fergus replied, noticing as Symes did not that the girl on the divan seemed to grow white as he spoke the words.

"Well, get in touch with her son and notify him of his uncle's death. His number's not listed but I have it here."

It was Larry Harrowgate's telephone number that Symes repeated.

At Saenger Theatre Sunday

Marlene Dietrich, Warner Oland, Clive Brook together, in a scene from Paramount's colorful "Shanghai Express"

"Shanghai Express" is a story of love and adventure, in which Marlene Dietrich plays the part of Shanghai Lily, a woman who lives by her wits in the coast cities of the Orient and who, in the vernacular is known as a "woman." It will be the Saenger theatre's feature picture for two days beginning Sunday.

The original story was written by Harry Hervey, a master of fiction literature having an oriental flavor. Recently, Hervey was discussing "Shanghai Express" with Hollywood friends and recounting his experiences in the Far East.

"Once the lure of the Orient gets in the blood, there is no resisting its call, said Hervey. "Shanghai Express" was born of a thrilling experience I once had on a trip from Pek'n to Sranghai. The Chinese revolution was in full swing and my train was held up by revolutionists, a common occurrence at that time. By adding a few characters and embellishing the drama, there was plenty of it there at the time, I had the story."

Political Pow-wows Started in State

Wheels Begin Turning As Campaigning Time Looms Near

The announcement by former gov. Charles H. Brough of his candidacy for the United States Senate and his attack on President Futrell of the University of Arkansas gave political observers and speculators material for comment. Until a recent date, it was believed that Dr. Brough would be found among the supporters of Gov. Harvey Parnell in his race for senator. Speculation is now on how much strength heretofore regarded as belonging to Gov. Parnell will follow the Brough lead.

In view of the fact that there is a nation-wide demand of larger or lesser proportions for referendum on the question of prohibition, announcement by Vincent M. Miles while addressing the Garland County Young Democrats Club recently that he favors the proposed referendum resulted in quite a lot of speculation. Whether the action by Mr. Miles will result in declarations by other senatorial candidates is not known. The Miles position will, draw fire from Arkansas prohibitionists but, wth the field of senatorial candidates so large, supporters of the referendum idea believe the position was well taken.

That the campaign being waged in certain circles against the present system of operating trucks as common carriers will come in for a certain amount of discussion during the coming political campaign is indicated by the announcement of Melbourne Martin, candidate for United States Senator, that he would discuss the question before a group of railroad employees at Searcy. How far the matter will go in receiving attention from the candidates remains to be seen.

The race for railroad commissioner from the Third District—the only district which will elect a commissioner this year—will be at least three cornered. That was assured by the recent action of W. S. Evans of Saline county, who filed the Corrupt Practice Act pledge as a candidate for the position. Other candidates already in the contest are Ed. Harper of Camden, seeking re-election, and Lon Cravens of Hampton. Claude Mann of Malvern, publisher of the Meteor-Journal has been reported as seriously considering a proposal that he enter the race.

That the field of candidates for Representative in Congress from the seventh congressional district will be unusually large is indicated by a report that H. H. Naff, merchant and planter of Portland, will ask the place. Already Wade Kitchens, of Magnolia and Fletcher McElhannon of Arkadelphia have announced their candidacy in the race and Congressman Tilman Parks of Camden is considered a certainty as a candidate to succeed himself.

The inaction on the part of persons said to be probable candidates for governor continues to feature the race for that office. Although some three or four men have made definite statements to the effect that they are candidates for the place, but one, W. P. Wilson, of Little Rock, has been doing any active campaigning. None of the others have indicated anything like a definite date on which his campaign will open. It is generally believed that the race for other state offices will not start until that for governor gets underway.

New Cotton Crop

ROCKINGHAM, N. C.—The farming department of the University of North Carolina is experimenting with a "combination cotton crop." On a 10-acre field near here the cotton is sown broadcast like grass seed. The mature cotton is mown like hay and the entire plant, cotton, stalk and leaves, is converted into cellulose. From this explosives, paper, artificial silk and other articles are made. No spinning or picking is required.

Seek Stutter Cause

MADISON, Wis.—University of Wisconsin scientists are studying the cause of stuttering, and George A. Kopp, research chemist, is making his work on the assumption that stuttering is caused by certain inorganic deficiencies in the blood. He is using cod-liver oil, ultra violet light, viosterol, with calcium lactate in an effort to increase the blood serum calcium, a disturbance of which is believed to cause stuttering.

War Preparedness?

PARIS.—A gas mask for every person in France has been ordered by the French government. Fifty million of these protective masks have been contracted for, and specifications require that they run for 10 hours without renewing the chemicals in them. They are supposed to be protection against the deadliest gases made.
